Principal's Welcome

Sir John Franklin High School opened its doors back in 1958 and today we celebrate the 60th graduating class of SJF. Therefore, this is a special group of kids – our "Diamond" class.

I truly feel connected to the Grad Class of 2019 because I have been their Principal for their whole high school career. During that time, I got to travel with some of them to China, Kenya, Germany, Poland, and the Czech Republic. I've seen them receive awards, win tournaments and perform on stage. Those adventures are filled with incredible memories. I'm looking at these grads today and thinking of my traveling companions (what was I thinking??). Cindy and Ryland – we have been around the globe. Robbie – we have been tight for years (thank me later Kathryn). Grant Kenny – better known as Kenny G or the Intramural King. Hannah Farrell realizing that she is the karaoke Queen and DJ. Being one of the first few people to hold Emma Willoughby as she entered this world. One funny story will never be forgotten; Markus Cluff at the open house during his grade 9 year. His mother, Jill wanted to know what the expectations were at SJF...I start in with my "cellphone" policy. Markus stops me and says, "Hold on...I don't have a cellphone...I'm still waiting for my carrier pigeon."

I feel I have gotten to see them grow up and become the young adults you see in front of you today. Memories that I will never forget.

What a special day...exams are over... beautiful weather (at least today it is) and summer is finally here... today is the day that everything changes. You will wake up tomorrow after a long, exciting and exhausting day today and you will be finished high school. Some of you may be stressed about your final marks you will receive in a few weeks, but today is a day you let go of that – enjoy the memories you will make on this day.

Graduating is a goal in a person's life and you have achieved that goal. It is a turning point...adults will say to you "real life starts now". That is true, but that should not scare you from the next stage of your lives. The people around you will continue to support you.

As you look back at your high school career I hope you will remember certain events:

Winning Challenge Cup the last two years in a row, our girls dominating on the court, in both Spike-It and Cager – every single year, NWT Skills competitions in Edmonton and Halifax, Drama Productions: Little Mermaid, Laura Denis, Beauty and The Beast, Lion King...this is what we are at Sir John

High school is much more than Social Studies (sorry Mr.Kowalzik) or French (sorry Mme Ricard)...it is a time where you form the strongest memories compared to other stages of life, where lifelong friendships were formed. A time when you developed the foundation to learn life's lessons – school actually does prepare you for the future. What I am talking about is beyond the textbook.

I am confident that you have all learned to work with others, take constructive criticism and move forward, build respect with others that you may not have gotten along with and strived to be better tomorrow then you were today. These skills were not developed overnight. The hours and patience your parents poured into you doing homework at the kitchen table, helping you put together a science fair project, reminding you of your deadlines and due dates. Teachers giving up their lunch hours, and after schools four to five days a week, so you were ready for that test/exam or because you were going to miss classes for some reason. The friend that was there for you when things did not go so well. You may not remember these exact moments but they did make you who you are.

I do not want to give you a lecture...so we will call it my advice speech...I want to give you a quote:

"There will be times when your best isn't good enough. There can be many reasons for this, but as long as you give your best you'll be ok."

With this quote in mind, try to remember the following:

- (1) Celebrate the successes along the way "the glass really is half full"
- (2) Never stop learning. Take those mistakes and learn from them.
  - a. No one is perfect - take it in – think about it and then do it differently.
  - b. Right now you may seem tired of learning – but your brain is a muscle that needs work – never stop working it.
- (3) Communicate face-to-face and thank people along the way
  - a. Respect the tech age - when you're older, you'll never think "I wish I spent more time on Snapchat"
  - b. Life is too short
  - c. Relationships are important – quality relationships

'There will be times when your best isn't good enough. There can be many reasons for this, but as long as you give your best you'll be 'OK'

I wish you all the best...come back to visit...gives us an update...we will tell stories about the old days.

TOAST TO TEACHERS

~ by Diana Rockwell

The memories of school that we have are, more often than not, shaped by the teachers we have. Each year from kindergarten to grade 12, there are about twenty other students in a class with you and before long, their names will have faded away into distant memory; however, it is often your teachers that make the biggest impression. Thirty years from now, we may not remember the one hundred plus people in our graduating class, but we will remember the teachers who helped us get here. We will think back to the time when Mr. Peters taught us offstage etiquette by making us carry furniture to the shed at -30, or when Mr. Curran started diploma prep on the very first day of class, or the dance party with Mr. Mansfield on the last day of class, or the beep test with Mr. Wicks, or the annual Camp de Neige with Madame Jacqueline, or the musicals with Mr. Daly or the endless science and historical fairs. I know we will forever be grateful for the support and encouragement of all the teachers who have helped us on this journey. The belief they had in us has fuelled the belief we had in ourselves; without their investment in our future, I would not be here... WE would not be here today.

TOAST TO PARENTS

~ by Meadow Munroe & Aurora Nind

Not so long ago you brought us into this world. We were uncertain, terrified to leave your side and just beaming with possibilities. And although we never realized, you were probably just as uncertain and maybe just as terrified. You saw our potential throughout the years no matter what. Now look at us. You probably remember dropping us off for our first day of kindergarten and having us crying or throwing a tantrum begging you not to leave. Fast forward to high school, you helped us through all of our weekly mental breakdowns.

You are selfless enough to keep us from the worries of adult life. Giving the best advice, although we may not realize it at the time, you were almost always right. You have put our interests ahead of yours for the last eighteen years and now it is your turn. Go back to school if you want, go skydiving, do something crazy. Let loose a little, I know we will. Let's just hope none of it ends up on facebook. I hope not too many of us cause too many heart attacks by changing our major to art history or peace studies at least once within the next four years. I hope one day we are all able to raise kids or nieces and nephews as well as you did. But if we fail we know that we have outstanding grandparents to fall back on.

REPLY FROM TEACHERS

~ by Maureen Tonge

How many of you have ever seen "The Bee Movie"? I loved that movie There are some wonderful life lessons in that animated film. In this Top Five List, I'm going to share with you a couple of the lessons from The Bee Movie.

5) Release limiting beliefs and adopt liberating beliefs - Barry B. Benson initially believed that myth that "Bees can't fly in rain; in fact they can! They just don't like to, but they do have the ability!

4) Nourish yourself, aka self-care - we become our daily habits - so why not make them beneficial?

3) Adopt an "attitude of gratitude" - start and end your day with gratitude; whether it's a practice of identifying one to three things that you're looking forward to before you even rise out of bed.

2) Be kind & love yourself first - We only have love to give to others when we give it first and foremost to ourselves.

1. Be courageous - show up to your life - be fully present and be curious to grow into your best self.

Merci. Masi cho. Quyanainni. Thank you!

REPLY FROM PARENTS

~ by Hovak Johnston

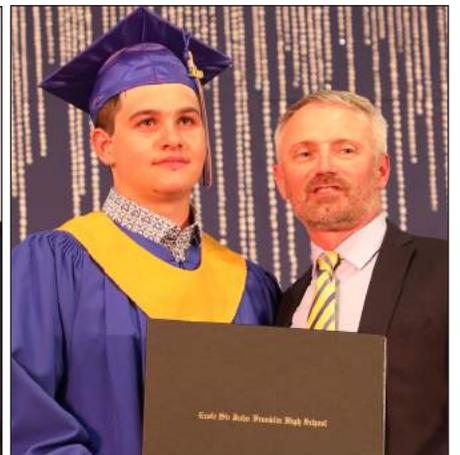

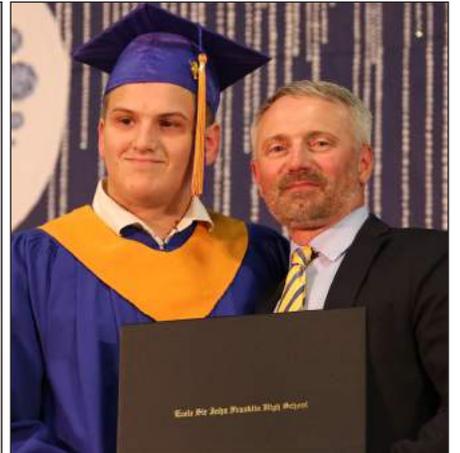

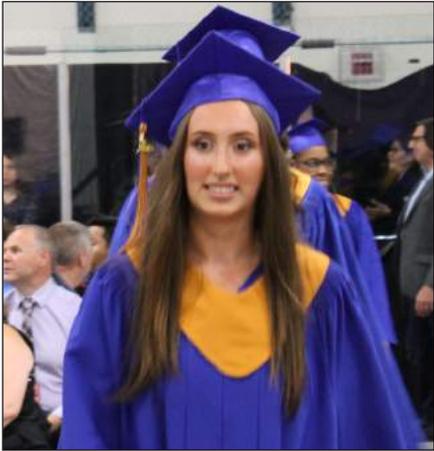

I would like to start by saying on behalf of all the parents, we are very proud of you for reaching this milestone. To the students who had parents or someone in your life who pushed you for the last 12 or more years, who would wake you up in the mornings, drive you to practices, watch your games and your plays, who yelled at you to get to school and nagged you to do your homework... you're welcome. It wasn't easy for us either. But we did it so you could be here tonight. This does not mean you get to play Fortnite whenever you want! Before you do anything else in life, you need to do this: I want you to thank those people who helped you get this far. I guarantee you that not all your classmates sitting beside you had someone to push them to complete school. To those students who didn't have that someone in their life to take them to practices or attend games and plays. Maybe they had to work after school or look after brothers and sisters. To the ones here who had to do it on their own... words cannot express how proud I am of you. I grew up in a residential school and like some of grads spoke about today, they were the first ones to graduate in their family, I know how you feel and you should be very proud. I was in my late 20's before anyone told me they were proud of me. I don't want anyone here tonight to wait that long. I am proud of you!

Congratulations Grads!

Congratulations Grads!

Valedictorian's Address

I would like to take a moment to thank everyone who has helped us get here today. These past four years have been a roller coaster of highs and lows and we would not be here without the support of some key individuals. First of all, I would like to thank the entire staff of Ecole Sir John Franklin High School. Whether you were our teacher, our coach, our chaperone or just a friendly face in the hallway, you all played a role in shaping us into the people we are today. Next, on behalf of all of the grads, I would like to thank the parents. Not only have you sat through this three hour ceremony to watch your child walk across the stage for 20 seconds, but you have been there, cheering us on for our entire lives. Although it may not have always shown, your regular "how was your day at school"s and "have you finished your homework yet"s were greatly appreciated. Lastly, I would like to thank the graduating class of 2019. I cannot even begin to describe the honour it is to be up here speaking to you today because at the beginning of grade nine, I was too scared to talk to any of you at all. Having switched school boards for high school, I remember walking in on the first day of grade nine not knowing anyone and worried I wouldn't make any friends. Within days, these fears were forgotten as I began to meet you all. I soon realized that this class is full of welcoming, friendly and compassionate people and I instantly felt at home. Now, after four years of sharing classes, sports teams and memories, I feel an immense amount of pride to be graduating alongside all of you and I cannot wait to see what great things the future holds for this class.

Comme dit le proverbe: Quiconque n'a pas voyagé, croit son pays le centre du monde. Before you roll your eyes at another french kid making another french reference, trust me, this one applies to all of us. If you were not forced to memorize and participate in daily recitations of "la fable" in Mme. Ricard's grade nine french class, then here's the translation: "Those who have not traveled think that their country is the centre of the world." Although they were definitely a pain in grade nine, I now understand how important these words truly are. As we leave high school and start the next chapter of our lives, we must open our minds to new possibilities and be willing to embrace the new adventures that we are headed toward. These past four years of high school have been amazing and I know that we have all made memories we will cherish, but it is time for us to go out and see what the rest of the world has to offer. Whether you are leaving town next year or sticking around, it is no secret that our lives will be significantly different. We are going to discover all of the greatness that is out there in the world, but we are also going to learn that at times, life can be tough. I hope that this new sense of freedom excites you rather than intimidates you because I know that we are ready.

In the fable, the partridge from the north receives an invitation from the partridge of the south. At first he is hesitant to visit because he is unsure of what he will find in this new part of the world. He ultimately decides to go and is amazed to find that the southern partridge's home is even more magnificent than his own. Well, grads of 2019, this is your invitation. Although we have no idea where the future will take us, I know you all well enough to assure you that it will be amazing. No matter where you go, you will do great things, but if I could give you one piece of advice it would be to never forget where you came from. You are going to receive countless invitations in your life, many of which will bring you to unexpected destinations, but being a part of this grad class is extremely special and it is something you should always hold on to. Having grown up in the north, we have several advantages that will serve us for the rest of our lives. For one, we are pretty tough. Not many people can say they've trekked to and from school in complete darkness and very few can say they've endured the 40 below weather of the grade nine winter camps. But we've done it all. As we move out and begin to experience the world for ourselves, this toughness is going to be what sets us apart. I am confident that each and every one of you will be able to overcome whatever obstacles life throws at you because I have seen how resilient, perseverant and tough you all are. Due to our size, we have also developed a strong sense of community. I have experienced first hand how welcoming this class is and I know that many others would agree with me. Over the past four years we've grown from classmates to friends to a family and I am extremely grateful for the connections I have formed with all of you. I know that being a Sir John grad of 2019 will always be a part of my identity and I expect that no matter where life takes you, you will feel the same way. Being a falcon is something to be proud of.

So, class of 2019, as we all go our separate ways I would like to leave you with some words of inspiration...

Sortez de chez vous, promenez de par le monde. Aller voir comment d'autres gens vivent chez eux. Vous apprendrez a les mieux connaitre, et vous cesserez de croire qu'il n'y a que chez vous le meilleure ou le pire.

Go out, travel around the world. Go and see how others live their lives. You will learn to get to know them better and you will learn that the unknown can be beautiful.
